Cultivating Peace: Conflict and Collaboration in Natural Resource Management

Daniel Buckles International Development Research Centre Canada World Bank Institute

Repeated efforts at collaborative management that engage the range of stakeholder needs and perspectives can be an investment in peace maintenance. In Cultivating peace: conflict and collaboration in natural resource management, Franke et al. emphasize the importance of collaborative management in resolving conflicts and promoting sustainable natural resource management. Collaborative Management Working Group, Cenesta, Tehran, Iran. Bromley's Cultivating Peace: Conflict and Collaboration in Natural Resource Management further reinforces the need for conflict resolution and collaboration in natural resource management, highlighting the importance of stakeholder analysis in conflict management. The management of natural resources, successful policy, and stakeholder management are critical components of managing NRM conflicts and achieving sustainable outcomes. Managing Natural Resources for Development in Africa: A Resource Book, World Bank Institute, Washington, D.C., 1999. This publication highlights the role of collaborative management in Conflict and Collaboration in Natural Resource Management. Pendzich, C.